Charities of John Hopkins.

It is well known to our citizens that John Hopkins, esq., had long ago determined to devote the bulk of the great fortune which he has accumulated as a former merchant in our midst to three grand and munificent enterprises in the interests of humanity and education, which are to be great and beneficent landmarks of Baltimore in all the brilliant future which we anticipate for this city. These enterprises embrace, first, a hospital on the largest and most improved scale for the sick, on the site of the old Maryland Hospital in East Baltimore; an asylum for colored orphan children on separate ground, and finally, a University on his estate of Clifton, within one mile of the city. With the view of carrying out as speedily as possible the first two and more especially humane of these beneficent inspirations, Mr. Hopkins has just addressed a letter to the board of trustees of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, which was received and read at a meeting of the board on Tuesday evening last. In this letter Mr. Hopkins sets forth in very perspicuous and practical terms the manner in which he wishes his noble provision for the relief of the sick and of the orphan carried out. His plans practically look to the beginning of the work while he lives, so that he can, it is hoped, see with his own eyes that the foundation is laid as he designs, and that it is carried forward in the right direction.

Mr. Hopkins has set aside property to the value of at least two millions of dollars to be dedicated to the support of this great hospital, in addition to the grounds for it in the heart of the eastern part of the city, and amounting to some thirteen acres, bounded by Wolfe, Monument, Broadway and Jefferson streets, which were purchased by him at a cost of $225,000 for the purposes of his charity. But meantime, during his life, and until the hospital buildings are completed, he places $100,000 per annum at the disposal of the trustees, in order to carry out his wishes, and from the resources of the property which they are hereafter to receive they are privileged to appropriate $20,000 per annum to the maintenance of the Colored Orphan's Home, which is to accommodate three to four hundred of that class, while the hospital is designed also ultimately to provide for four hundred patients.

Mr. Hopkins urgently desires the hospital buildings, in their construction and arrangement, to compare favorably with any like institution in this country or Europe. There can be no doubt that this purpose will be faithfully carried out, and the hospital be made as elegant in scope and design as any in existence either in the old or new world. The plans and experiences of the Woolwich (England) Hospital, the great Hospital of St. Thomas in London, as well as of all on the continent will be considered with regard to every possible advantage. As it is designed to prepare the grounds and make choice of the plan for the hospital edifice during the present year, the building committee, will proceed at an early day to the North with a view of examining the hospitals of the principal cities in that quarter. Doubtless, therefore a magnificent, building, among the noblest monuments of the Monumental City, will in due time be erected, and, what is equally important to the sick as any hospital accommodations, ample grounds, appropriate ornamented with trees and flowers, healthful to air, with pleasant prospects of harbor, city, and river, will be afforded, while for the convalescent a resort is to be provided, eventually, at a distance from the city.

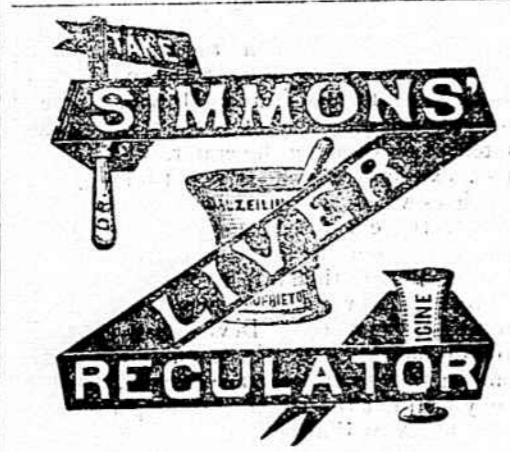

The establishment of a training school in the hospital for nurses is the first provision of the kind which has been made in any institution in this country, and the value of it cannot be over-estimated. The good that has resulted from the labors of Florence Nightingale in this regard in London have been highly beneficial, and the influence of her devoted and ameliorating example is now to bring forth fruit in Baltimore. The details prescribed in regard to separate divisions and wards for different classes and different diseases are as practical as they are humane. In all the arrangements Mr. Hopkins wishes it borne constantly in mind that the hospital should form, ultimately, a part of the medical school of the university. Finally, we may mention with honest pride the fact that it has been reserved for Mr. John Hopkins, a Southern man, the life-long resident of a Southern State, to make provision for the erection of an asylum for the education and maintenance of orphan colored children on a scale never before attempted in any part of the country. No such institution for colored orphans as is here provided for can be found anywhere else in America as this, the munificent creation of a Southern man, and every one of the trustees of which, like himself, was born south of Mason and Dixon's line.

With regard to the university which Mr. Hopkins designs to establish, it may be stated that under the provisions of a general law of the State this institution, bearing his own name has been already organized by the appointment of trustees, and Mr. Hopkins has provided for free scholarships, by which poor and deserving students from Maryland and Virginia shall be maintained. In addition to the accommodations for the university proper, the estate at "Clifton" will afford ample space for the establishment of a botanical and agricultural school upon an extended scale. It is believed that Mr. Hopkins has set apart by his will his whole interest in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, which is only less in amount than that owned by the State of Maryland and the city of Baltimore, to this university, the actual market value of his stock, some 15,000 shares, amounting to day to about two million five hundred thousand dollars, all of which is in addition to his gift of the Clifton estate of near four hundred acres. It may be added in this connection, as showing the appropriateness of the basis for this educational institution, that when prior to 1857 the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company was embarrassed by monetary difficulties and internal dissensions, he came forward, and by endorsing its notes to a very large amount pledged his private fortune to its support, and thus insured the completion and perfect prosperity of the road. He never doubted for a moment the success of the road nor of Baltimore, and the great charities now about to go into effect are in accordance with what he thoroughly believed to be the great destiny of Baltimore.

These several beneficent projects of Mr. Hopkins, taken as a whole, by the magnitude of their munificence rival the princely charities of Peabody and McDonough, the latter of whom gave over half a million to Baltimore for a farm school. Any community is fortunate which possesses men who devote their great wealth to the relief of suffering humanity. Such acts as those of Girard, of Philadelphia, and John Hopkins, of Baltimore, are monuments in great cities of the higher life and purposes to which commerce and material development may be made subservient: though the beneficence of Mr. Hopkins must be conceded to be broader and wiser than that of Mr. Girard, inasmuch as there is no bigoted ostracism of religion in its conditions, but, on the contrary, religion is explicitly recognized, and it is only directed that no denominational differences shall be regarded in the dispensation of his charities.—The wide scope of Mr. Hopkins's benevolent designs is as impressive as the vast extent of his beneficence. The institutions above mentioned are made his residuary legacies. Mr. Hopkins having already made liberal provision for his own relatives.—Balt. Sun.
